THE TELEPHONE IN THE CYCLISTS' PARADISE AND AUTO- MOBILISTS' ARCADIA.

Long Island with its beautiful scenery, through which run miles of good roads and cycle paths, is a veritable Paradise for the wheelman and an Arcadia for automobilists. The many towns and villages, each with its comfortable Hotel or Inn, make a trip of whatever length a matter of comfort as well as pleasure. A run along the ocean side and thence over to the picturesque North Shore gives one some idea of the varied beauties of this most attractive of Islands.

No paradise for cyclists or automobilists would nowadays be complete without telephone service. It is comfortable for the traveler to feel that he can from any point be placed in verbal communication with any other part of the Island, or if necessary with the main land and far away places.

It lessens the incidental woes of the cyclist or automobilist when in trouble to know that he can within easy distance find a telephone station, where he may call for assistance.

Telephone Pay Stations are located in many of the depots of the Long Island Railroad, where efficient service will be rendered at all times. Long Island is very fortunate in having the service of The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, which practically reaches the uttermost parts of Long Island, and Exchanges or Pay Stations are now located in most of the towns and villages from Brooklyn eastward. This places the cyclist or automobilist within easy reach of aid in case of a breakdown, as well as making it possible for him to communicate with distant cities, which are thus brought within as easy speaking distance as New York or Brooklyn.

At most of the Summer Resort Hotels there are Pay Stations, so that a guest is able to receive news from town, and transmit frequent instructions if necessary. This is a very pleasant condition for the traveler who can call up and make arrangements for his accommodation.

Probably no one more thoroughly appreciates the value and convenience of the telephone service than the business man who goes out of town for the summer, or whose family sojourns at the seaside, while he remains in town. The value of the telephone service in social matters is strongly felt in the summer in obtaining information as to trains, boats, calling ones' friend, engaging accommodations, making up wheeling parties, arranging routes for runs, ordering carriages, and making easy many other details of social life. As an element of safety and in an emergency, the telephone service is invaluable.

The physician may be summoned, police aid called or fire alarm sent more speedily than by any other means. To the broker, banker, merchant, as well as the wheelman and automobilist, the telephone brings the latest news from headquarters as nothing else can; keeps him in touch with the market quotations, and saves much vexation; enables him to inform his family instantly and surely if he be detained in town; also to learn if anything of importance will necessitate a change in his plans.

The telephone service of to-day places the patron on Long Island, through the system of Long Distance wires, in direct communication with any of the 75,000 stations on and around Long Island, and with over 500,000 stations throughout the United States.

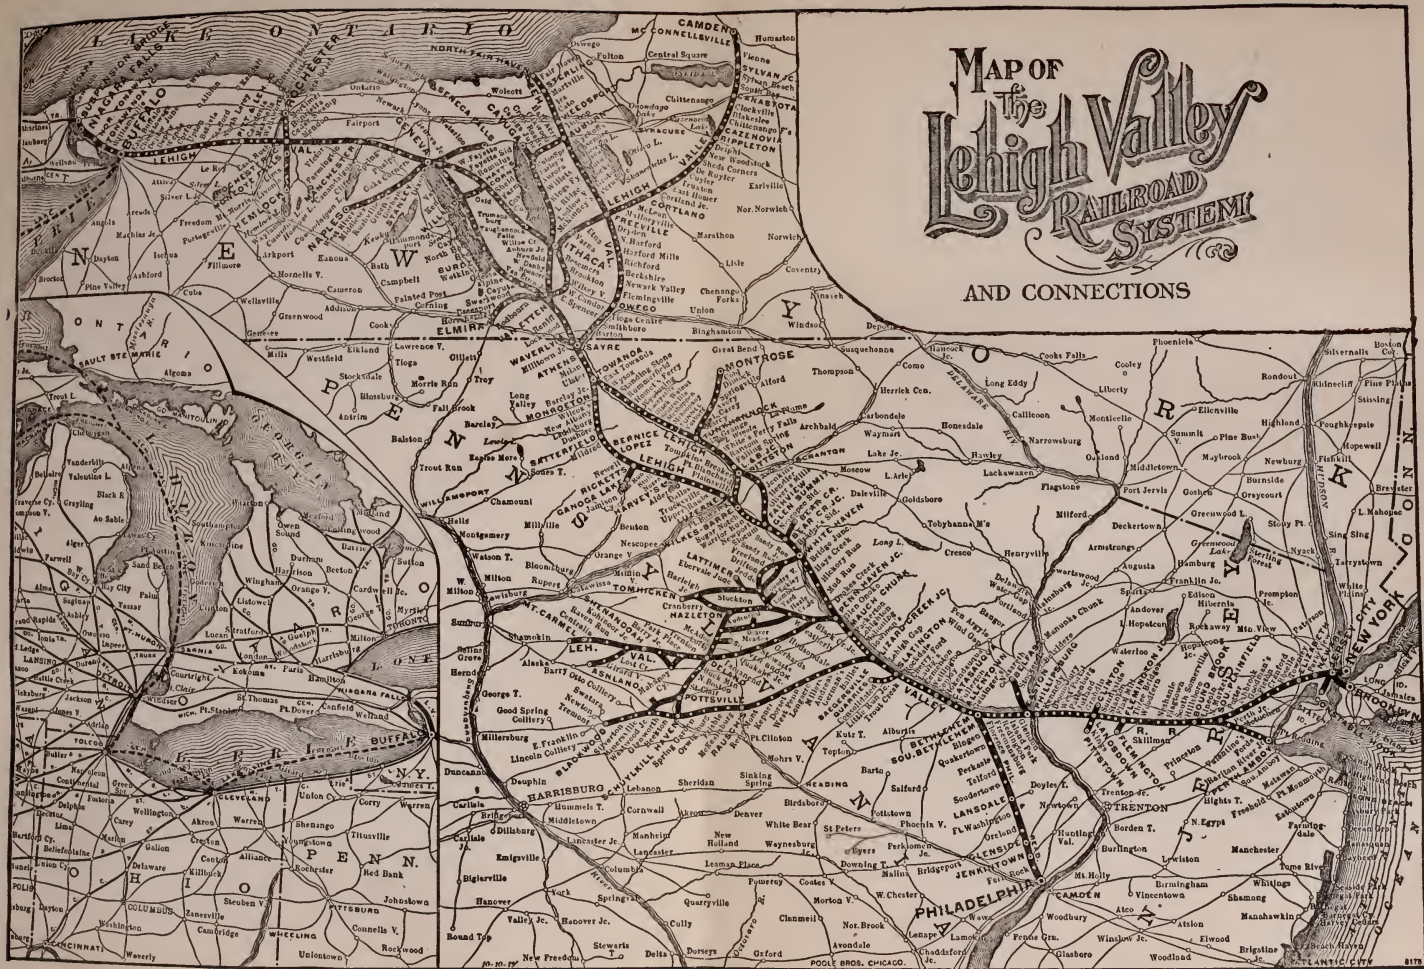

The general offices of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company are at No. 81 Wiloughby Street, Brooklyn, while an office at Riverhead, L. I., furnishes any information desired in that section of Long Island.
